

STICKS TO IT.

Bro. Pike Reiterates his Charges Against Mr. Bethurum and Gives Him Something More to Think About.

I wish to reply to the statement made by Mr. D. P. Bethurum in your last Tuesday's issue. He says that Mr. Austin did not tell your correspondent what he reported for he is too much of a gentleman, &c., and he (Bethurum) calls on me to rectify it at once, &c. Now I wish to say that I have written nothing to take back. If I had written anything that was not true, I would gladly correct it, but I feel satisfied that Mr. Austin made the statements to me on the streets in Lancaster, some two or three months since? It occurred in this way. I approached him and said: "Mr. Austin, I understand from a great many people in our county, that you left several barrels of whisky at Mr. Bethurum's wine house, and when you went back it was all gone. I would like to know the facts about it." In reply he said: "I left 22 barrels, I think it was (20-old barrels any way,) and when I went back it was all gone, except one piece of a barrel." I feel confident that Mr. Austin will verify what I have said and instead of taking anything back, I now wish to affirm and emphasize it.

I can see the hole that Mr. B. is working to get out through. He probably thinks that because the distillery was not registered in his name and because the records in Mr. Austin's hands do not show him to be connected with the business, that we have no right to say that it is Bethurum's property, &c., but notwithstanding the above may be true yet I claim that we have a legal right to say, Bethurum's wine house or Bethurum's distillery, and why? Because Mr. Bethurum swore in our last May circuit court, when on trial for selling whisky, that he then owned the distillery, and if what Mr. B. claims is true, and he has not been engaged in the business for two years, then I would not ask him how it is that the records of our circuit court show him as standing indicted for the unlawful selling of whisky, on the following days: May 25, '93, Sept. 20, '93, Sept. 25, '93, Feb. 13, '94. And Mr. B. knows that the people of this county, all speak of the distillery and the wine house as his, and that it is so understood. I do not wonder at Mr. B.'s denying the charge, for I can prove by good men that he has made and sold whisky in violation of the United States laws, and the State laws and that he has denied it, in the court and out of it, and that it is nothing new for him to deny these things, and now I wish to say to Mr. B. in all good feeling, if I have said one word that I can not sustain, and if he will show it to me I will gladly correct it, for God knows that I would not do him an injustice. If he wishes this matter to stop here, all is right, and if not, I will produce the facts connected with his life for the last few years, as regards the business, and they will show whether I have exaggerated anything in connection with it or not. Respectfully,

A. J. PIRK, Correspondent.

A Dramatic Scene.

A dramatic and solemn scene was witnessed at the dedication of a church in Utica, N. Y., a short time ago. Deacon John Schermerhorn, 77 years old, had taken great interest in raising funds for building the new edifice. He was one of the trustees of the church, and at the close of the services the pastor urged him to make a few remarks. He sang two verses of a hymn and closed thus: "I have prayed for this place a great many times. Now I see my prayer answered. Lord, let now thy servant depart in peace. Lord, Jesus, you know it is all right between thee and me." As he finished the sentence Mr. Schermerhorn dropped and immediately expired. Of course there was intense excitement in the congregation over this remarkable answer to prayer for release from life.

Blue Back Salmon For Canning.

The run of blue back salmon in the Columbia this season is almost unprecedented. One cannery down the river, where they are packing in large quantities, became overstocked recently, and 13½ tons of spoiled fish had to be thrown away. The run of chinook is only fair and not up to former years. In former times blue backs were never recognized as fish fit for the table, and fishermen, when they caught them in their nets, usually threw them back into the stream. Now the blue back is a staple product of the cannery.—Portland Oregonian.

A Mosquito Yarn.

The biggest mosquito story of the season comes from a Maine man who says that when he approached his summer cottage the other day he noticed, or he thought he did, that somebody had taken the liberty of painting his door over, but before he had found words suitable for the occasion his wrath turned to dismay on discovering that the change of color was due to the mosquitoes, who were waiting for him to come and let them in.—Lowiston Journal.

THE CROWNLESS
MARTYRS OF THE MARRIAGE RING.

BY E. T. SMITH.

WRITTEN FOR THE INTERIOR JOURNAL.

A great lump arose in Mr. Carter's throat, but steadying his voice he said: "Be quiet one moment Mr. Allyn. Listen calmly to me for a minute. I think I can save you if you will do as I direct. If you do not avail yourself of this chance I am afraid you will be burned to death. There is no hope for me. The fire has so much headway now that I think it will be impossible for the force of rescuers to put it out with—"

"Oh! talk quick! God have mercy on me! Talk quick!"

"Don't interrupt me," continued Mr. Carter, "I am going to do a great favor for you. I am going to submit to untold anguish and pain in order that you may escape. You are married, I am single. Your life is more important than mine. For your wife's sake—for her sake—I do this—for her sake—"

"Go on! Don't stop. The fire is gaining ground every second," again Mr. Allyn interrupted.

"Underneath me," continued Mr. Carter, suppressing his emotion, "is a pool of scalding water. I am lying on a car seat which keeps me from being scalded. I can work this seat from under my body, with your assistance. Then by immersing my body in the scalding water, I think I can give you space enough to crawl over me, and escape through the broken window beyond us."

"For God's sake, hurry up then."

"Don't be impatient, I am getting the locations, now, with my hands. But first promise me to always be kind to your wife, to devote your life to her happiness—to—"

"What the d—! have you got to do with how I treat my wife? What is she to you?"

Before Mr. Carter could reply a long, flickering flame of fire burst through one of the window panes with a loud report.

"I'll promise anything! Just let me get out and I'll promise anything! For God's sake hurry up! I am suffering all the tortures of the damned at the thought of being burnt alive!" said Mr. Allyn, changing his tone.

"I am hurrying all I can, though it means untold tortures to me. You have not given one thought to what I must suffer, but never mind about that, I am as anxious for you to escape, as you are yourself. But don't be too sanguine, I am quite stout and it is possible that I cannot lower my body sufficiently to allow you to pass—"

"Oh! don't say that! Let me try! Quick or it will be too late!" Mr. Allyn agonizingly cried out.

"Put your hand under my body, here, now seize the seat and pull. Now!"

When the seat came out Mr. Carter, with a silent invocation for fortitude, quickly allowed his body to sink down into the pool of scalding water. He could scarcely keep from crying out in his agony. Ten thousand red hot needles seemed to pierce his flesh. His temples throbbed until it seemed their veins would burst. His brain seethed with fire. Through his tightly clenched teeth he muttered:

"Now go! Remember about your wife—your promises—"

Mr. Allyn waited for no second invitation but crawled quickly over Mr. Carter's sunken body, reached the window and emerged in safety.

After Mr. Carter saw that Mr. Allyn was safe a sudden chill seized him, then his brain began to wander and he babbled of cool, spray, splashed rocks, of clear pebbly streams, of grassy awards, starred with dandelions and daisies and of brown-eyed, golden-haired fairies singing and dancing in sylvan solitudes.

When Mr. Allyn emerged from the window the rescuing party, headed by the conductor, were busily engaged in bringing water to subdue the flames.

"Are you hurt?" the conductor asked Mr. Allyn as he crawled out.

"No," Mr. Allyn replied.

"Are there any others under the side of that car?" asked the conductor.

"Yes there's a big fat duffer under there with both legs broke," Mr. Allyn replied, as he began to lick the dust from his clothes with his handkerchief.

"Hurry up with the water boys! There's a man under the wreck with his legs broke, we must save him! Hurry the water along!" said the conductor. Then turning to Mr. Allyn, he said:

"Here, if you are not hurt, take this bucket and help bring water."

"Excuse me, I've got enough of it. I'm no hog. I know when I've got enough!" said Mr. Allyn, as he walked away flicking the dust from his clothes.

"That's exactly what you are and a d—d one at that!" rejoined the conductor, as he hurried away for more water.

But of what avail are man's feeble efforts when Death hovered over and with dusky wings fanned the willing flames?

The fire was beyond control. Its flaming eyes glared with expectancy on the pinioned prisoner, as he babbled of sunbeams glinting through "the verdurous roof's lush-leary greenery," of the "tinkling tenor of the clear, pebbly streams, of the cool, dark shadows of murmuring pines! His forked tongue leaped savagely forth to reach him. Panting with rage, its black breath darkened the sky. The begrimed and flame scorched conductor dropped exhausted to the ground and sobbed out:

"Boys its no use! We've done our best. He has stopped talking now. The last words I heard him say were: 'Evelyn, for your sake—'"

In a few seconds there was nothing left except a lot of twisted and warped iron, a heap of ashes and smouldering coals, "a ghostly Gogoloth," to mark the spot.

When the news of the wreck reached White Sulphur it caused a great commotion. The visitors flocked to the telegraph office anxious about expected friends and relatives.

The first telegram received was from Mr. Allyn announcing his safety. Mrs. Allyn's maid took this, and rushed away to Mrs. Allyn's room to deliver it. When the maid rushed in she found Mrs. Allyn sitting on the side of the bed weeping bitterly.

"What is the matter, ma'am?" anxiously asked the maid.

"Oh! I had the most horrid dream. After you left, I laid down and dropped off to sleep. I dreamed there was a fearful accident on the railroad and one very dear to me was killed, oh! what agony he suffered!" Mrs. Allyn broke down and again began to weep.

"Well, I declare, ma'am, that's strange! There has been a bad accident on the railroad and they say lots of people were killed. But I hope none of your friends were hurt. Here's a—"

"An accident, where? To which train?" with blanched cheeks Mrs. Allyn asked.

"To the train going east, the one you and Mr. Carter—"

Before the maid could finish Mrs. Allyn threw up her hands and dropped heavily to the floor. The maid ran out and started down the hall, screaming at every step for help.

Friends hastily gathered in Mrs. Allyn's room, picked her up and gently placed her on the bed, then two or three of them started for the doctor but the maid had anticipated them and was already on her way back, accompanied by the doctor.

"How did it happen?" asked the doctor as he hurried along to Mrs. Allyn's room.

"I was telling her about the accident on the railroad, when she suddenly threw up her hands and fell to the floor."

"Was she expecting any friends by the train?"

"Yes sir, her husband was on the train."

"That accounts for it. She has, I hope, only fainted. In telling news like that you ought to be very particular. Was her husband hurt in the accident?"

"No sir, I had a telegram from him which I was taking to her, but she fainted before she read it. Oh! I am so sorry if I'm the cause of her fainting. I didn't know before she cared so much for her husband. He used to go on hunting and fishing trips and stay for weeks at a time and it didn't seem to worry her much."

"You can't tell by appearance about such things. There is no greater mystery than a woman's heart," said the doctor as he entered the room.

The crowd made way for him, as he walked to the bed on which Mrs. Allyn had been placed.

He gazed on her pale face, whiter now than the pillow on which it rested but lovely, still, in its pallor. Her uncondemned tresses nestled around her dimpled shoulders like a cloud of gold.

The friends and family with tear-drowned hearts and stifled agonies anxiously awaited the doctor's decision.

Can his skill bring back the roses' bloom on those pale cheeks or gem with rubies, again, those deftly chiseled lips? Can it bring back the light of life to those sweet, brown eyes?

The clock on the mantel softly ticked the seconds away. Through the open window faintly floated the whistle of a distant locomotive. Through a rift in the curtain a gleam of sunshine crept, and, resting on her hair, seemed a crown of glory.

The doctor gravely knelt by her side and felt for her pulse. He placed his ear over her heart and breathlessly listened for its faintest flutter, then raising up, he hoarsely whispered:

"SHE IS DEAD!"

THE CASEY COUNTY FAIR.

The Liberty Fair proved to be a paying institution. The crowd in attendance the first day was tolerably good, but the two last days' exhibition drew like a circus used to in Stanford before the license fee was put out of sight, and the crowd each of those days was estimated at 2,500 to 3,000. Everybody in attendance seemed to be out for fun and an exploration of the mysteries that a day subjected to the strictest scrutiny may bring forth, and hence better humored assemblages were never seen. A pen picture of the immense crowds might be painted on the imagination by stating briefly that they would compare favorably with the crowds that assemble at representative Fairs in the Blue-Grass. Fair women and chivalric men were superabundant, and what more could have been expected? The Fair was splendidly managed and the premiums liberal. All rings were well filled, the trotting races were close and sure enough horse races, but the bicycle races, as was the case at the Stanford Fair, proved to be too one-sided to entertain.

The fat man's race raised a roar, especially when Sam Rout fell and almost rolled heels over head when he was within a few yards of the wire and the race was conceded to be his. Sam is the shape of Anderson Nunneley now, and has been training himself for several weeks, using weights, etc., but his tumble lost for him the prize of $5, though it was worth more than that amount by a great deal to the tremendous and appreciative assemblage. Had he not looked back and stumbled his toe, he would have gotten there. In his next race Sam should "remember Lot's wife," and never look back. There were three entries in his race.

The gentleman that got the prize in the ugly man's ring got his just deserts. If on the face of the earth he has a competitor, a genuine one I mean, it would take a whole heap of time and money to find him. His face will break any glass. It is not safe to tell tales and call names, too, but if this should fall under his eye, he will be conscious of the fact that I am dealing in facts, if he has ever seen himself in a mirror. He is about 6 feet 1 and looks like he had been in many thrilling escapades, in each of which he was somewhat disfigured, and all this additional after nature had done all she could in making him a fit subject for the ring he entered at the Fair. He would have been as good for the blue tie in a similar ring at the World's Fair as a nickel is for a ginger cake. I wish you could see him just once. No betting was done in his ring—it was too one-sided.

The baby show was one of the most interesting features of the programme. There was quite an array of handsome youngsters.

The hotels and boarding houses seemed to be equal to the big job of accommodating the innumerable guests from many Kentucky towns, and I heard of nobody "sleeping 5 or 6 in a bed crosswise," as Ed Walton told me was his experience at a hotel while attending a recent Fair, where the men outnumbered the beds in that proportion.

The hop at the handsome court-house Wednesday night was largely attended and proved quite enjoyable. The Stanford orchestra furnished the music. Walk McKinney was "prompter," and a better one never lived.

We all witnessed many funny things. But the funniest of all—may be, Was Congressman Silas Adams Throwing at a wooden baby.

The night of the hop, several quiet old gentlemen from Lincoln were at the Napier House, in a retired portion of the hotel enjoying tired nature's sweet repose. A fun-loving crowd of young men, "after the ball was over," sought to disturb their peaceful slumbers by catching one, two or possibly three of a flock of geese that invade Liberty's Public Square, and throwing them in on the beds of the above referred to reposing gentlemen. Being up to snuff in several secret lodges and their pass-words, they recognized none of them in the ejaculations of the gander that had by the young men been forced to visit the old men, and the fowls were unceremoniously ejected, amid the laughter of a big crowd that had gathered to see the feathers, etc., fly. For further particulars, inquire of the president and secretary of the Stanford Uniformed Band, the members of which (to digress a little) did a great deal of courting in the "State of Casey" during the Fair.

The married men of the Band behaved beautifully and were never seen promenading with more than two lovely ladies at one time. The band stand was honored by visits of many lovely damsels.

The directors and visitors spoke many kind words about our Band, which was duly appreciated. In fact, everybody was so considerate and took so much interest in the boys while there, that individually they feel like exclaiming—"Give me LIBERTY or give me death."

While in Liberty on a serenade, Harvey Helm made a decided hit. In oratory he touched the skies, And liked to have never "lit."

DRY AGAIN.—The saloon men tempted fate when they attempted to use the technicalities of the law to defeat the popular will. In March last the Stanford precinct, including town and country, voted by a majority of 24 to prohibit the sale, barter or loan of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors. We were not one of the 24, but in our issue of the following day we accepted the result without even a grimace and promised to support the law as fully as if we had been for it. Unmindful of the fact that majorities must ever rule in this democratic country and that the people love fair play, the saloon men set to work to get another chance. It was discovered that towns of the class of Stanford had been given in the general charters exclusive control, through their council, of the liquor traffic, and that she had a right to vote on the question separately. County Judge Varnon refused to order the election when petitioned, but the matter being taken before Circuit Judge Sautley he issued a mandamus compelling him to do so. The election was accordingly ordered. We opposed it on the grounds that if Stanford had peculiar rights in the matter, she had forfeited them by voting without protest in the precinct elections. A majority had said we must try local option and we wanted their will respected and the trial made. It seems that a good many others thought as we did, for in the election Saturday a vote of less than 300, 50 more than half voted to sustain the result of the first election, thus settling the question in favor of local option for three years at least, and for all time if it proves the panacea for all ills that its advocates claim. We shall use our humble efforts to make it so, trusting to be convinced that our preconceived ideas with reference to high license are wrong and that prohibition can and will prohibit. Let any animosities that the contest may have created be forgotten and let us all strike hands in the enforcement of the new law and labor for the final extermination of that giant evil—the accursed rum traffic.

The latest scandal is that set afloat by the threatened suit of divorce by Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt, of the millionaire family. It seems that Willie, which by the way seems to be an unfortunate name, is not happy in his domestic relations, having a cold hearted, imperious woman for a wife, and that he has permitted his affections to wander to a beautiful, but heartless adventuress, Mrs. Nettie Neustrutter, and brought shame on himself and family. The woman has been the mistress of many men, whom she has dropped after bleeding them to death, and she is working off the millions of her newest lover, with her accustomed ability. Strange indeed that a man will be such a fool.

UNDER a law recently passed postmasters are authorized and empowered to administer any and all oaths required to be made by pensioners and their witnesses in the execution of their vouchers with like effect and force as officers having a seal and such postmaster shall affix the stamp of his office to his signature to such vouchers. For the work he shall receive not exceeding 25c for each voucher. The law will be of great convenience to pensioners and put a few dimes in badly paid postmasters' pockets.

AMONG the deaths of the last few days are those of two men, who took a big part in the war of the rebellion, Gen. N. P. Banks, of Massachusetts, and Sam J. Kirkwood, of Iowa. The former had been governor of his State, speaker of the National House and commander of the Federal department of the Gulf during the war; the latter war governor, U. S. Senator and Secretary of the Interior. One was 80 the other 82 years old.

THE Harrodsburg Sayings is going to join the small, but select, list of semi-weeklies, beginning Sept. 5, being moved thereto more by the impulse of enterprise and profit, than the desire to fill a long felt want. Editor R. L. Marimon is making the Mercer county people a mighty good paper. He could hardly do otherwise with such capable assistants as John G. Phillam and John H. Grimes.

COL. LEER, the author of the infamous remark about Breckinridge and the Blue Grass maidens, has found his surroundings too hot for him and has departed for more congenial climes, to be absent till after the election. A dirty-mouth villainous minded man like he might forget ever to come back and not be missed.

W. A. WILSON has been long time getting there, but he got there all the same. The president has appointed him postmaster at Hopkinsville. He is an old newspaper man and is, of course, both capable of filling the position satisfactorily and deserving of the honor conferred.

Such brutal outrages as are sometimes practiced upon the negroes by cowardly fiends in the South are enough to fire the Northern heart and keep up the feeling that that race is still the victim of malice and cruelty. Near Millington, Tenn., Friday night, a barbarous mob surrounded and shot to death six negroes in charge of an officer, as they sat manacled and helpless. They were charged with barn burning. These murderers deserve to be burned alive.

TO DAY, the Orphan Brigade, God bless them, meets at Russellville, where elaborate preparations have been made for its entertainment. The ranks of this daring command are fast decimating and but a few years will elapse before their valiant deeds in war and their achievements in peace will be a memory, so let us cherish them while we may.

—J. T. Veatch & Co. bought this week of John Noel, Forks of Elkhorn, Franklin county, a car load of extra nice heavy fat hogs at $5.15 per cwt.—Jesseamine Journal.

—The $20,000 Nutmeg Purse, of which $11,000 went to the winner, was won at Charter Oak Park, Hartford, Conn., by the great mare Nellie A., owned by Mr. T. C. Anglin, of Lexington.

—Robert J. broke the world's harness racing record for one mile at Fort Wayne going the distance in 2:03½ and dethroning Nancy Hanks, Mascot and Flying Jib, who had made the record of 2:04.

—E. P. Woods bought of Mrs. Mary Matheny and her son Will, 90 hogs averaging 175 pounds at 4½c. Mr. Woods shipped them to Cincinnati and while driving them to the depot lost 12 by the severe heat.

—Hustler Russell, driven by Thomas C. Yeager, got second money in the 2:20 pace at Fort Wayne, Ind., Friday. He won the first two heats but lost the last three to Guerilla, owned by G. & C. P. Cecil, of Danville. Best time 2:12½.

—The new Louisville Jockey Club was organized by electing the following officers: Wm. F. Schulte, president; Emile Bourlier, vice president; M. Lewis, Clark, presiding judge; Charles F. Price, secretary; Henry Wehmhoff, treasurer.

—A. C. Robinson sold to W. S. Beazley, for J. W. Bales, of Madison, 49 head of export cattle, weighing 1,536, at 4½c. Tudor & Long, of Madison, passed through Monday from Mercer county with 215 extra feeding hogs that they purchased in Mercer, at 4½c.—Lancaster Record.

—M. S. Baughman's great roadster mare, Ella B., is doing splendidly since he brought her home two weeks ago and has fattened over 100 pounds in that time. She will be in fine shape for the St. Louis Fair and the horse that beats her will know that he has been in hot company.

—William Rue was particularly lucky with George F. Anderson's King Chester at Lexington Friday. He wore the blue in the ring for harness stallions four years old and over and also in the sweepstake harness stallion ring, defeating Highland Denmark and several other good ones.

—W. A. Tribble and A. Logan Denny both fared badly at the Lexington Fair, neither of them taking a string. This is something unusual for Mr. Tribble, who has been winning right along with Kate Malloy, while it is also out of the order of things for Mr. Denny, who always shows good horses and gets his share of the premiums.

—To E. B. Caldwell, Jr.
 We the undersigned voters of the Waynesburg precinct respectfully solicit you to become a candidate for magistrate in the above magisterial district.

W. F. Camden, H. H. Singleton, Daniel Jacobs, James Wilson, Payton Rounton, J. C. Perkins, W. R. Singleton, W. D. D. Hayes, Silas Williams, Garland Singleton, H. W. Caldwell, Craig Gooch, D. W. Heister, M. T. Morgan, G. W. Clift, S. P. Shoop, Wesley Simes, G. E. Ellison, A. Singleton, B. S. McMullen, H. S. Williams, W. K. Tary, G. A. Padgett, W. A. Horton, John J. Mosier, H. Floyd.

MATRIMONIAL MATTERS.

—Arthur Loring Mackaye sues his former friend, Paul Latzke, for $50,000 for alienating his wife's affections.

—Marriage license was issued yesterday to Robert House and Miss Elizabeth Long. Both live in the Goshen Neighborhood.

—Charles Westendorf and Miss Annie Klohn, both from the Fatherland, will be married to-day at the groom's home near Ottenheim.

CRAB ORCHARD.

—Madame Rumor says another wedding will occur in our town. "Guess who?"

—Crab Orchard is as is usual in summer very gay and everybody seems to be having a good time.

—Watermelons are plentiful and the darkies are happy and I honestly believe some of the white folks are too.

—Mrs. Gus Hofmann, Mr. Felix Myers and Mr. F. W. Tifford are now on the sick list. Hope all will be better soon.

—The younger set were nicely entertained by Mrs. D. B. Edmiston Saturday evening in honor of Miss Grace Tudor's birthday. All report a grand time.

—Miss Katie Slaughter left Wednesday to attend school at Midway. She entertained a number of her young friends very pleasantly Tuesday evening before her departure.

—Prof. Stapp has leased the James McAlister property and will open "College Home" about the middle of September. He proposes to build up a first-class female college in our midst and we sincerely hope that he will meet with the hearty support of the entire community and that Crab Orchard will yet have a college that she can be proud of.

—Mr. F. A. Zeller and Mr. Ralf Kane, of Noblesville, Ind., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Holdman this week.

—Miss Hattie and Mr. James Jones, of Buckeye, visited Miss Lottie Dillion during the week. Rev. Will Anderson, who conducted such a successful revival of religion in our midst departed Thursday to complete his course in theology at the Moony Creek College, near Knoxville, he is a superior preacher now and if he still improves is bound to rank among the first in the land.

—Miss Sabra P. Hays spent a few days with the family of Mr. R. H. Bronaugh on her return from Pittsburgh. Mrs. S. A. Higgins is visiting relatives and friends in Stanford.

LONDON, LAUREL COUNTY.

—R. M. Jackson and E. K. Wilson went to Crab Orchard Sunday.

—Mrs. Sallie Sawyer accompanied by Miss Virgie Hardin, left for Wilmore, Monday.

—I am happy to say that I was mistaken about Mrs. Edward Parker having typhoid fever. All the other patients are getting along well.

—Col. Armstead Adams and Mrs. Celia Rice and son, of Fort Worth, Tex., left for Garrard county, Saturday, after a week's visit in London.

—The London Manufacturing Company has $7,700 worth of orders on hands to be filled.

—Mr. John Feltner has bought Mark Hardin's restaurant at Corbin. Mark has recovered sufficiently from an attack of typhoid fever to be able to sit up.

—The report to the Louisville Post that Clay will carry Laurel county for governor is evidently an error. Gen. Hardin has always had strong supporters here and has always had the county's instructions. He is known to nearly every democrat in the county, having spoken for us when his services were badly needed and for these services, if there was no other reason, "the boys" will certainly stick to him.

CHURCH AFFAIRS.

—Elder J. G. Livingston is holding a meeting at Fariston, Laurel county, and had a number of additions to last accounts.

—The Richmond Register says that Bro. Barnes has changed his shibboleth from "God is Love and Nothing Else" to "Breckinridge is the Man and Nobody Else."

—Next Sunday is Rev. W. E. Arnold's last of this conference year. His sermon will be a review of the work of the year and he hopes to have as many of his members present as possible.

—Bro. McGarvey has taken our good Brother Barnes to task for advocating the election of Breckinridge and says right out that his glory having departed, he has to strike for something sensational. He thinks it was an evil wind that blew the evangelist back to Kentucky.

—Rev. J. T. Zimmerman caused a sensation at a funeral at Crawfordsville, Ind., by denouncing the black coffin in which the deceased reposed. He declared it emblematic of sin and loudly proclaimed that good men should be buried in white coffins and their death observed by feasting and rejoicing.

—Messrs. A. V. Sizemore, W. F. McClary, G. G. Wine, A. C. Carman and J. F. Blankenship attended the Tate's Creek Association at Scafold Cane last week and report a large attendance and a season of brotherly love and Christian fellowship. The next meeting will be with the Gilead church in Madison.

—Revs. T. T. Eaton and Carter Helm Jones, of the Baptist church, believe in the scriptural injunction, "Let your women keep silence in the churches." They were down to speak at the State Sunday-School Convention, when they saw that two ladies were on the program to make addresses. They immediately withdrew from it and wrote: "As we read the new Testament, and as well nigh all the scholarly commentators expound it, the Holy Spirit distinctly and unconditionally forbids women addressing public assemblies of men and women."

CITY AND VICINITY.

Saturday was one of the hottest days of the year, old Sol forgetting that summer was gone.

This vote of Saturday was a protest against the "Black Maria."

Lost—Between Stanford and Danville, a silver hair pin. Please leave at the L. J. office.

Penny has the best stock and will sell watches and jewelry lower than you can buy elsewhere.

Lost—Silver hair pin between Presbyterian church and railroad crossing on Danville street. Liberal reward. Leave at this office.

The Somerset Fair beginning to-day. Special trains will leave Junction at 8 a. m. and McKimney at 8:25 a. m. The rate is one fare for the round trip.

If you want your watch or any jewelry repaired, take it to Penny's. Mr. Deckelman does the work well and promptly; never disappoints a customer.

Mr. R. O. Ford, of Manchester, candidate for State treasurer, has made the Courier-Journal a present of a live rattlesnake, a picture of which is given in Friday's issue.

Until Sept. 1, 1894, we will sell a 5-year guaranteed, high armed, six-drawer sewing machine for $25 and a No. 7 six-hole Arizona cook stove for $14.50. W. H. Wearen & Co.

The members of the democratic county committee are requested to meet at the court-house at 2 p. m. next Monday, county court day, for the transaction of important business. R. R. Gentry, Chairman.

W. S. Tuttle, formerly marshal of Junction City, but for some time a brakeman on the Cincinnati Southern, was killed in a collision near Mason, this State. His remains were buried at Shelby City yesterday.

KILLED.—Mr. W. T. Tucker, son of Mrs. A. Steenbergen, of Rowland, who is a daughter of the late, Mr. T. D. Hill, was killed by a Louisville Southern train, upon which he was brakeman, Thursday. He was thrown between the cars and mashed so horribly that he died in a few minutes. He was an excellent young man and his mother is overwhelmed with grief over his untimely death. The remains were brought here and interred Friday afternoon.

A dozen or more of our bicyclists will attend the Somerset Fair this week. Jim Burton, who beat Somerset's champion once, is training day and night and there are those here, who think he can and will beat him again. They come together in the five-mile handicap on Friday. George L. Penny is one of the seven entries in the three-mile handicap on the 31 day and in the boys' race the first day. James C. Sautley and Sam J. Embury, Jr., of Stanford, are entered.

The Shelby Sentinel tells of a musical and literary entertainment at Finchville in which our young townsmen, Mr. Thomas H. Shanks, took part "in a brilliant rendition of that master-piece of Lew Wallace, 'Ben Hur's Chariot Race.' Mr. Shanks' description of the race was so glowing, and realistic that some of the older men in the audience who had 'been there themselves' leaned eagerly forward to see whether the 'Jew' or the 'Roman' would first come under the wire."

The local optionists held a rousing meeting at the court-house Friday night, composed of white and colored people, which was addressed by Rev. H. C. Morrison, W. E. Ellis and — Caidwell and by Dr. P. V. Glenn, the colored man, who advertises patent medicines. All the speeches were pointed and stirring, but interest mainly centered in that of Dr. Glenn, who is an unusually well educated man and is deeply interested in the advancement of his race. He is also a fine singer and stirred up the audience with several selections. We looked in at 10:30 and the meeting was still in progress with the air so close and hot, it was difficult to see how anybody could breathe. Surely these zealous people will get their reward, hereafter, if not here.

DRY.—The local option election resulted as we had predicted, in a signal victory for the drys, the vote standing:

| | DRY. | WET. |
|-------------------|------|------|
| Court-house..... | 52 | 19 |
| Engine-house..... | 47 | 44 |
| Maxville..... | 71 | 57 |

Majority..... 170 120

A pretty large majority in a vote of 290, besides it is safe to say that half of the 100 that did not vote are glad the majority is on the side it is. Everything passed off good naturedly, the saloon men recognizing the inevitable soon in the fight, and throwing up the sponge. The preachers and others zealous in the cause remained on the streets all day and exhorted the wavering voter to come to the help of their cause. A good many of the colored people voted for local option and several worked hard for it. When the result was announced the faithful fairly went wild with enthusiasm and Bedlam and Parnassus seemed to be let out. People shouted, church and court-house bells took up the glad refrain, farm bells answered and the roller mills whistle seemed to try to blow the steam valve open. It was soon over, however, and a solemn quiet settled with the shades of evening on the town. Now let us have peace, good order and brotherly love.

The Stanford Uniformed Band will give a grand open air concert in front of the court-house this evening.

READ THIS.—More boarders wanted. Have two beautiful front rooms. First class table. Also day boarders wanted. Kate Dudderar.

FORESTUS, the 12 year-old son of Mr. George Baker, of the Highland vicinity, fell while playing at school and broke his right arm just above the wrist.

FOR RENT.—A desirable residence on Danville street. Good garden, good cow pasture, good water at the door, &c. For terms &c., apply to Dr. J. B. Owsley or Dr. H. Reid.

IRISH HANSFORD was placed in jail yesterday on a writ sworn out by Sallie Best, also colored, charging him with raping her Saturday night. Hansford's trial is set for 10 o'clock this morning.

W. G. DUNN, who has been sent to the asylum several times, was tried for lunacy before Judge Varnon and a jury Saturday. After being out a few minutes the jury rendered a verdict declaring him to be of sound mind.

The public school, Prof. C. H. Holmes, principal and Miss Cettie Thurmond, assistant opened yesterday with 60 pupils. Prof. F. J. Duffy's school, the Male Academy, also begun, with 16 pupils enrolled. Miss Mattie Paxton will assist him.

JAMES JONES, son of Mr. Rhs Jones, of the West End, but who has been running a tin shop in Louisville for a number of years has rented Mr. A. T. Nunneley's store-room on Lancaster street, opposite the jail, and will open a tin store. Mr. Jones is a tinner by trade and will do roof and other kinds of work.

Is remitting for his paper, Mr. J. E. Bruce, of Kansas City, says: "Kansas City is fast coming to the front as a live stock market and we think the time not far distant when it will be the leading market of the country. We handled 200,000 cattle here during the month of August, 16,000 calves, 225,000 hogs and 40,000 sheep. If you want to see something grand just make us a visit and see the yards."

The Caledonians kept open house again Saturday evening, but owing to the work of prohibition meetings and other attractions, the gathering was not as large as usual, though the court-house was nearly filled. Jack Beazley welcomed the audience in a few well chosen words, Miss Annie Straub sang a couple of solos very sweetly; Joe McAlister, Jr., read a very creditable essay on Great Men; Miss Edna Courts recited beautifully and gracefully, while at proper intervals the Stanford Orchestra gave some well rendered selections. The debate on whether the negro had been treated worse than the Indian by the white man was decided by the judges in favor of the negro side, which was represented by J. A. Beazley, S. W. Menefee and Joe Severance, Jr., while Logan Hughes, T. W. Jones and W. H. Shanks pictured the sorrows of the red man. The inimitable E. C. Gaine read the paper, which caricatured and scintillated with the wit and wisdom peculiar to the editor.

The declamatory contest at the Opera House by Mr. E. H. Beazley was handicapped by a big prohibition meeting at the court-house, and there was trouble and delay about the music, which the Stanford Orchestra had promised to give, but it was a success all the same. Miss Alice Holmes, with her usually accommodating spirit, came to Mr. Beazley's rescue and made such excellent melody on the piano, that everybody was glad the Orchestra tickled. The Lancaster entries didn't show up, but the other boys were in good trim and they were not missed. The declaimers were Ashby M. Warren, subject, "One Niche the Highest," and J. Richard Bush, "The Maid of Orleans," both of Stanford, Ward W. Goodloe, "The Death of Henry Clay," and Archie R. Cook, "The Black Horse and His Rider," of Danville. All did so remarkably well that the judges, Messrs. R. Graham Price, of Danville, Lewis Walker, of Lancaster, and J. N. Saunders, of Stanford, had much difficulty in reaching a decision, which was finally announced by Mr. Walker in a neat speech, after which he presented the $20 to Mr. Warren and the $5 to Mr. Cook, the prizes for the best and second best speakers. There was some dissatisfaction felt and expressed that Mr. Bush should have failed to get a place, as many thought him fully entitled to it. Mr. Goodloe's friends also thought he should have had at least second money and he did get one vote for it. During the absence of the judges, Miss Flora Ballou, gave a pantomime; "Rock of Ages Cleft for Me." She was becomingly attired and as her willowy form responded gracefully to the sweet and suggestive words of the song sung in subdued tones by Misses Alice Holmes and Annie Straub, she was the object of great admiration. Pending the further waiting on the judges she again appeared and went through some other beautiful and graceful movements. Mr. Beazley deserves congratulations on the excellency of the entertainment and Mrs. Pamela Brown is entitled to the highest praise for the artistic floral and other decorations of the stage.

CALL and see my elegant line of fall suitings. The noblest line ever shown here. H. C. Rupley.

THIEVES tried to get into Hon. J. S. Owsley's meat-house Saturday night, but the lock was too strong for them and they gave up the job.

MR. RICHARD BINN's spring house was relieved of several gallons of milk, a good deal of butter and some clothes that had been left there, a few nights ago.

HORACE, the three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Forestus Reid, fell on an oil can while playing around the house and received an ugly wound in the side.

A LAMP was overturned in the court-house just before the Caledonians began their program and the blaze that resulted came near producing a stampede.
